

[\[back\]](#)

White T-shirts not the issue

Originally published in:

The Herald-Sun

Monday, December 08, 2003

Edition: Final

Page: B5

I am a sophomore at Jordan High School and when I read [DeWarren Langley's Oct. 13] article I was intrigued.

The white T-shirt ban did not really affect me at first because I do not wear white Ts very often. I did not think much about what the administration had done. However, reading this article opened my eyes. I agree with the author. It is not what a person wears that defines them, but how a person acts. Amending the dress code is not solving the problem, only changing the problem. ...

A lot of my friends enjoy seeing fights, but I have never shared in their interest. It is a good idea to try to "deter gang involvement." And instead of starting petitions against the administration or actively rebelling as many people did right after the ban was issued, people should create their own proposals to the administration and come up with solutions that they feel would benefit everyone.

Sonie Guseh, age 15

© Copyright by The Durham Herald Company. Original copyright 2003. Copyright renewed 2007. All rights reserved. All material on heraldsun.com is protected by U.S. and international copyright laws and may not be reproduced or redistributed in any medium except as provided in the site's Terms of Use.

[\[back\]](#)